Kids4Kids Race to Change Futures, Leave Their Legacy

This summer, members of the Share & Care Kids4Kids (K4K) group traveled to Light of Life Trust's (LOLT) Worli location to educate 40 students in computer science skills. The team of eight, led by Rhea Shah, included Rehan Shah, Shivam Modani, Rhyan Maru, Aarav Gandhi, Arhaan Gandhi, Soha Mehta, and Yuvraj Mehta.

Together, the volunteers taught the students at LOLT how to use Google Docs, Google Sheets, Google Slides, Microsoft Word, and Canva. In addition to computer science skills, the volunteers taught different forms of art to provide a well-rounded experience for each student. One form of art, abstract cubism, allowed the students to be creative when drawing self-portraits using different shapes in order to define their facial features.

To express their gratitude for the opportunity to teach at LOLT, the eight members split the cost of purchasing a school bag for each of the 40 students and sponsoring them in an upcoming marathon fundraiser. To thank the team, a few students handmade cards to give to the volunteers.

For the volunteer team, the experience has inspired them to become even more involved with Share & Care's Signature Programs, continuing the legacy of service across generations.

Testimonials From the Trip

For one of the volunteers, Rehan Shah, the experience was inspirational: "I hope to continue empowering underprivileged children, bridging the digital divide, and fostering equal opportunities for education in this world." Rehan hopes to join the volunteer program once again next year to educate more students in computer science as it continues to shape the future.

For Rhea Shah, coordinating the summer program over a seven-month period was difficult and time-consuming, especially with the time difference between India and the U.S. However, "the look on the faces of each kid made it all worth it" for her. "I remember one girl whose entire face lit up whenever I looked at her;" said Rhea, "those two weeks included inspirational moments and gave me even more reason to fundraise for the students."

Another volunteer, Rhyan Maru, found the summer program refreshing: "Embracing new teaching methods sparked my enthusiasm and anticipation for each session, making it a refreshing and exciting experience. Witnessing their progress and growth as they grasped the concepts has been fulfilling."

This National Nonprofit Day, join us in continuing our legacy of providing life-changing opportunities, for our beneficiaries and members, alike by making a tax-deductible donation. For the sixth year in a row, we have been awarded a four-star rating from Charity Navigator, (the highest rating possible) in part due to our efficiency in creating lasting change with your donations. No gift is too small, and each one is greatly appreciated.
